Nice to meet you and thank you for sharing such an important post, I will definitely use that information.Q: How do I get extra fields from an adb query when querying an AndroidManifest file via ADB? I am using ADB to query the the AndroidManifest.xml file on an emulator. I am using the following command to do so: adb shell am query -p com.myapp -e num_handlers com.myapp This returns a list of the apps it is aware of. In other words, it returns the AndroidManifest.xml for all apps of mine that are already on the emulator. This is great but what I am trying to do is find a list of apps that are also on the device. One way to find these is to query the stock AndroidManifest.xml file, which I can do via the following command: adb shell am query -p com.android.providers.downloads.documents -e doc_name "Everything" However, I want a way to query the ADB command so that it will return me the apps I have installed and the manifest for those apps. (For instance, I have maps and music apps installed, and the maps app has an intent filter for ACTION_VIEW. I want to see that manifest in the results.) Is there an ADB command that will give me all the apps that match a given filter? A: I don't think so, but you could make a shell script that would run adb's command line and parse the output. You could basically use this to loop through everything you'd like to find, and just do a set of adb command line calls. The shell script would have to be quite sophisticated, but this could be done.
