So i should be able to download anything. Im using Safari.Q: Minimum set of optimal cuts I'm trying to make a program with GUI that asks the user for the number of groups, with a maximum of groups to select from. A group is a sublist (in a list) that sums to one and has no repeated values. So an example input is: Groups: 3 List: [1,1,1], [2,2,2], [3,3,3] I need to find the minimum set of sublists I could divide the input into to get this: [1,1,1], [2,2,2], [3,3,3] Notice that each list must sum to 1 and no list can have repeated values. The minimum number of groups is 3, but I haven't found an efficient way to check that the sublists are all used. So I currently just check that the last element is the same for all three sublists. A: Let input be Groups: 3 List: [1,1,1], [2,2,2], [3,3,3] and suppose the three lists are lst1: [1, 1, 1] lst2: [2, 2, 2] lst3: [3, 3, 3] The solution is obtained by dividing the input list into exactly three sublists (no part may be left out). Let us call the first part len1, the second len2, and the last len3. The first part is a concatenation of
